

Yale School of Public Health
Yale University School of Medicine
Postdoctoral Associate

The Yale School of Public Health invites applications for a full-time postdoctoral position to participate in a recently funded research project to reduce HIV risk behavior in Russia. The main goal is to assist with quantitative data analysis, prepare manuscripts and present findings.

Candidates should have a doctoral degree in behavioral science or public health, have experience in quantitative data analysis and have strong written communication skills. The position is available immediately. Review of applications will commence on May 18, 2009 and will continue until filled. The term of the position is initially for one year and is renewable for additional years. Applications should include CV, statement of research interests, and the names of three references and should be sent to Nadia Abdala, nadia.abdala@yale.edu.

Yale University is an affirmative action/equal opportunity employer. Yale values diversity in its faculty, students, and staff and especially welcomes applications from women and underrepresented minorities.